

Chapter 2 – Character Creation

In Chapter Two, we embark on a special prelude known as the Zero Mission. This unique session is designed to smoothly transition players into the immersive world of Neweyes, allowing them to immediately engage in role-playing without the need for a lengthy setup.

As the Storyteller, you'll guide the players through an intriguing scenario set at the Upper Room's Renewed Faith Church, a seemingly abandoned yet deeply significant church. Players will encounter seven allegorical church members, each representing a different class. These NPCs will serve as mentors, imparting wisdom and training in their respective fields.

To prepare for the Zero Mission, players should have their journals ready. This tool will be invaluable for tracking their progress, inventory, and details throughout their Neweyes journey. Players will jot down important notes, character decisions, and complete their most of their setup during this session.

The aim is to provide a seamless entry point into the world of Neweyes, ensuring that players can swiftly dive into the heart of the adventure. This chapter sets the stage for their character's development, offering a taste of the rich narrative and engaging gameplay that awaits them in subsequent episodes. So, gear up and get ready to guide your players through this exciting prologue!

EPISODE ZERO: THE MEETING AT UPPER ROOM'S YARD SALE

Scene 1: Discovering Your Class

As the Storyteller, your task is to set the stage for the players' adventure. Begin by describing the scene to the players:

The Upper Room Church sits in an average neighborhood nestled in a average city. Its a magnificent Gothic-style church that exudes an air of mystery. Its grandeur is accentuated by intricate stone carvings and towering stained-glass windows that depict biblical scenes, a testament to the master masons who crafted this sacred space centuries ago. Their meticulous artistry is still evident in every carefully sculpted detail. Some of the finest masonry took place at the creation of this Church, a testament to the skill and dedication of those craftsmen of old. Today, its hallowed halls stand silent, awaiting the day when the members hope to open the doors once more. To this end, they hold yard sales each week, diligently working towards the funds needed to re-open the church and breathe new life into its ancient stones.

Around the church, a lively yard sale is in full swing, with various church members proudly displaying an assortment of items. The atmosphere is filled with the hum of activity as curious visitors peruse through the array of goods. Amongst the hustle and bustle, several food trucks have gathered, offering a delectable variety of refreshments. One particular favorite among the attendees is the Sampson's Smoothies truck, known for its revitalizing and healing smoothies.

Seven unique church members engage in lively conversations with any visitors willing to listen.

Maintain a dynamic and engaging atmosphere throughout this scene. Know your content and mark pages that have pertinent information e.g. Food Trucks (p. 168), Church Members and their inventories (p. 177). Players do not want to wait while you read through the content.

This initial interaction sets the tone for the players' immersive journey into the world of Neweyes. Enjoy this pivotal moment of discovery!

The players, stepping into their characters' shoes, immerse themselves in this lively setting. Encourage them to interact with the church members, explore the yard sale, interact with the food trucks, and soak in the unique atmosphere. Allow them to take in the details, providing vivid descriptions of the surroundings. There's a man, Gabriel, that is watching the players the entire time but not in a creepy way. He's observing the players as they engage and will speak with them at the end when you feel their exploring is at a plateau.

At this phase, the players and Storyteller are engaging in role-playing for the first time. Make it fun and don't worry if they don't visit everyone and everything. Once this energy fades, introduce Gabriel.

Choosing a Class

As a storyteller, use Gabriel to instruct the players to approach each of the seven church members, who allegorically represent different character classes in Neweyes. Instead of advocating for their respective classes, the NPCs share insights about the biblical heroes they allegorize, creating a Sunday school-like experience. The players need to listen and see which story resonates the most with them. This will become their class.

Gabriel's says the following:

The Upper Room church could use your assistance, and these kind church members are eager to share their treasured tales, just as they did back when this Church was the heart of the community. You might be surprised by the incredible stories they have to tell. These stories hold the key to some remarkable insights that could help guide you on your path. But a word of caution: once you're drawn in, you may find it hard to step away. Will you allow these kind folks to share their cherished Bible stories with you?"

Class	Character/ Allegory	Example Dialogue
Paladin	Garret/Gideon (p. 177)	Garret: "In the days of Gideon, a humble man was chosen by the Almighty to lead a small army against a vast host of enemies..."
Minstrel	Melody/Miriam (p. 179)	Melody: "Miriam, a prophetess and musician, led the Israelites in joyful song and dance after crossing the Red Sea..."
Priest	Andrew/Aaron (p. 181)	Andrew: "Aaron, the first high priest of Israel, stood as a bridge between the divine and the mortal realm..."
Prophet	Delphine/Deborah (p. 183)	Delphine: "Deborah, a wise judge and prophetess, received divine insights that guided the nation of Israel..."
Soldier	Jason/Joshua (p. 187)	Jason: "Joshua, a valiant soldier and capable leader, led the Israelites in the conquest of Canaan..."
Tracker	Damian/David (p. 185)	Damian: "David, a shepherd and valiant hero, used his keen senses and knowledge of the wilderness to overcome formidable odds..."
Sage	Santiago/Solomon (p. 189)	Santiago: "Solomon, famed for his wisdom, presided over complex judgments and sought knowledge from the depths of understanding..."

Example Player Interaction: Player C: "I spoke to all the church members. Each class has its unique strengths. I think I'm leaning towards being a Tracker, like King David. His survival is something I admire."

Out of Game Discussion

As a storyteller guiding new players, it's helpful to convey the basic concept that the different classes in the game will have distinct playstyles, largely influenced by their attributes. This table serves as a straightforward reference:

	Strength	Dexterity	Constitution	Intelligence	Wisdom	Charisma
Paladin	16 (+3)	9 (-1)	15 (+2)	11 (0)	13 (+1)	14 (+2)
Minstrel	10 (0)	14 (+2)	12 (+1)	12 (+1)	10 (0)	16 (+3)
Priest	10 (0)	12 (+1)	14 (+2)	14 (+2)	16 (+3)	12 (+1)
Prophet	10 (0)	12 (+1)	10 (0)	16 (+3)	16 (+3)	12 (+1)
Soldier	16 (+3)	12 (+1)	14 (+2)	10 (0)	10 (0)	10 (0)
Tracker	12 (+1)	16 (+3)	12 (+1)	12 (+1)	14 (+2)	10 (0)
Sage	10 (0)	12 (+1)	10 (0)	16 (+3)	16 (+3)	12 (+1)

- Strength, Dexterity, Constitution: These physical attributes suggest a character's proficiency in more action-oriented aspects like combat, stealth, and physical endurance.
- Intelligence, Wisdom, Charisma: These mental attributes indicate a character's leanings towards more cerebral or social gameplay, such as conversation, healing, and persuasion.

You don't need to delve into intricate details initially. Just provide a general understanding that a character's attributes shape their primary abilities and gameplay style. However, if a player shows keen interest, feel free to explore the nuances further with them.

Receiving the Task

Once the players have chosen their classes, Gabriel assigns them the task of retrieving a significant item from the church that represents their chosen role in the game. Use the following table to give each player their task. If there's two players choosing the same class, just make a duplicate item for them to retrieve. e.g. Instead of one shield hanging on the wall, there are now two...

Gabriel says to the players:

"You've made your choices, my friends. Now, each of you has a task. Retrieve the item that for the church member. It will be a powerful representation of your choices and must be returned to the corresponding church member. They'll be so excited to know you retrieved the item for them."

Table of Class Tasks:

Item	Location	Quest Description	Gabriel's Dialogue
Garret's Sword of Old	Costume room on the second floor	Retrieve a wooden sword used in reenactments of epic biblical battles.	"The wooden sword, tucked away with the costumes on the second floor, holds memories of vibrant reenactments that once echoed through these halls. If I could just hold it once more and perform for the kids at this yard sale. Perhaps I can ignite excitement like I used to do."
Melody's Tambourine of Victory	Choir room on the first floor	Find a tambourine that accompanied the choir, filling the sanctuary with music.	"In the quiet of the choir room on the first floor, you'll find a tambourine. It once danced to the rhythm of devoted voices, filling the sanctuary with a melody that echoed the joyous praise of the congregation. Retrieving it would surely warm the hearts of these church members."
Andrew's Priestly Garbs	Office down the hall from the choir room	Obtain a pastor's stole worn by pastors in worship and delivering messages of faith.	"Down the hall from the choir room, you'll find the office. There, you'll discover a pastor's stole, a symbol of the pastors who once guided this congregation in worship and faith. Bringing it back would be a heartfelt gesture to these church members."
Delphine's Shield of Valor	"Daughters of Valor" room on the second floor	Seek out a shield used in teachings and stories for the women of the church.	"In the Sunday school room on the second floor, once known as the 'Daughters of Valor' room, there lies a shield. It was woven into the teachings and stories shared with the women of this church. Retrieving it would be a testament to the wisdom imparted through the generations."
Jason's Flag	Stage in the fellowship hall on the basement floor	Retrieve the Christian flag that symbolized unity and faith.	"On the basement floor, in the fellowship hall, you'll find the stage. Upon it, the Christian flag once stood as a beacon of unity and faith for this congregation. Returning it would be a powerful gesture to these church members."
Damian's Guiding Compass	Scout room on the basement floor	Acquire a compass that guided scouts in their faith and adventures.	"Next to the library on the basement floor, you'll find the scout room, once known to hold camping supplies for hundreds of young men over the years. This program developed some of the best leaders still today in our community. Within this room, lies a compass. It guided them on their adventures, much like faith guides us in life's journeys. Retrieving it would hold deep meaning for these church members."
Santiago's Favorite Childhood Book	Church library on the basement floor	Retrieve "The Lion, the Witch and the Wardrobe", a book that inspired imagination and faith.	"On the basement floor, in the church library, you'll find a book called, 'The Lion, the Witch and the Wardrobe'. Within its pages lie stories that ignited imaginations and kindled faith. Bringing it back would be a testament to the power of storytelling in nurturing faith."

Scene 2: Entering Good Shepherd Church

The Sanctuary Door

As you approach the magnificent doors of the church, their craftsmanship and stain glass beauty still inviting, you are met with a stark reminder of reality. The building has been officially condemned, labeled as “structurally unsound” by the city. Chains bind the doors, locked tight with a hefty padlock, a step to ensure no entry. A stark “CONDEMNED” notice is affixed to the wood, reinforcing the decree. To gain entry, you must rely on more than mere brute force; your wits and resourcefulness will be key.

Here’s a few ideas for the players to try, and it’s okay to share these if the player’s can’t decide on their own:

Wisdom (Prayer) Check (DC 16): Seeking God’s guidance, a sincere prayer may yield divine assistance. Successfully praying could lead to the revelation of a hidden key, a clear sign of divine favor.

Dexterity Check with Thieves’ Tools (DC 15): Utilizing the Tracker’s nimbleness and cunning, a dexterity check with Thieves’ Tools could discreetly unlock the door, allowing for a stealthy entrance.

Strength Check (DC 18): If subtlety fails, brute force might prevail. A successful strength check could allow a character to break the chains or force the door open, though this approach is likely to draw attention.

Creativity and Adaptability: If the players propose solutions that aren’t outlined here, that’s perfectly fine—in fact, it’s encouraged. Role-playing games thrive on player ingenuity and thinking outside the box. Be prepared to adapt and go with the flow. Often, the most memorable moments in the game arise from unexpected player ideas. Encourage them to think creatively, and be ready to facilitate and integrate their unique strategies into the unfolding story. This approach not only enhances player engagement but also enriches the overall gaming experience. Just remember to set a difficulty challenge that’s reasonable.

As your players face the large church door, it’s a pivotal moment for them to engage with the game and make their first significant decisions. Here are some key points to guide you and your players through this:

Present the Challenge Clearly: Describe the door and its apparent obstacles. Make sure your players understand they have several options: using strength, teamwork, tools, or observation to find a weak point.

Encourage Exploration and Creativity: Let your players brainstorm and discuss their options. Remind them that in NewEyes, creativity is rewarded, and they can try any reasonable action they can think of.

Guide the Dice Rolls: Explain that to attempt an action, they’ll roll a 20-sided die (d20) and add any relevant modifiers based on their character’s skills or attributes. For example, if someone is using strength to open the door, they’ll roll a d20 and add their Strength modifier.

Set the Difficulty Class (DC): This is a number you set based on how hard an action is. For instance, pushing the door might be a DC 18, meaning a player needs to roll a total of 18 or higher to succeed. You can adjust this based on how challenging you want the task to be.

Be Flexible and Supportive: Since everyone is new, encourage questions and be patient with the learning process. If a player wants to try something unique or combine methods, help them figure out how to roll for it. The goal is to make the game enjoyable and engaging for everyone.

Celebrate the Rolls: Whether they succeed or fail, narrate the outcome in a way that makes it exciting and integral to the story. Every roll is a chance to add to the narrative, regardless of its success.

Remember, your role as a storyteller is to facilitate the adventure and ensure everyone is having fun. This is a learning experience for all, so embrace the unexpected and enjoy the journey together!

Players will enter the Narthex doors near the “F1” label on the map.

F1: Narthex

This carpet is a vivid, matching maroon hue to that of the sanctuary, hinting at a deliberate aesthetic choice. Coats were once hung here, bulletins distributed, and greetings exchanged among congregants. A place where members could chat with the pastor and deacons before and after services, it served as a hub of pre-service activity.

Perception (DC 12): With a successful Perception check, players notice the faded poster on the wall, detailing a past financial campaign to save the church. It's clear they fell short of their goal.

Investigation (DC 15): A successful Investigation check allows players to closely examine the poster. They can discern some handwritten notes and figures, indicating efforts to meet their fundraising target. It seems this may have contributed to the eventual closure of the church, leaving everything here frozen in time.

History (DC 14): A successful History check reveals that the Narthex was an integral part of the church's operations in the past, serving various functions like coat-handling, bulletin distribution, and a meeting place for congregants. There's still an old hat and few coats hanging there. (Nothing is in the pockets except receipts for cleaning the coats).

Religion (DC 12): A successful Religion check helps players understand the religious significance of the Narthex as a transitional space before entering the main sanctuary. They recognize its historical importance in church customs.

F2: Sanctuary

As you step into the sanctuary, a sense of both reverence and nostalgia washes over you. The grandeur of the room is apparent, with chandeliers suspended from the high wooden rafters, casting a warm, golden glow across the space. Rows of polished pews stretch out before you, capable of seating a congregation of hundreds. Two stately staircases, one on each side, lead to a balcony that overlooks the main floor. The railing is adorned with a rich maroon curtain, lending a touch of elegance to the area.

At the front, an elevated stage commands attention. On the right, there's a larger pulpit, likely reserved for the pastor, while a slightly smaller one on the left may have been designated for an elder. The communion table, laden with trays, stands before the stage, while a baptistry is situated just behind it. Above, the choir loft and the organist's spot complete the scene.

The real gems, however, lie in the stained-glass windows. To your left, a vivid depiction of Jesus knocking on a door takes shape, illuminated by the gentle sunlight filtering through. The vibrant colors seem to dance, portraying a poignant image of invitation and welcome. On the right, another window shows Jesus cradling a lamb, his gaze filled with tender compassion. Surrounding him are symbols of ancient Jewish tradition, providing a rich tapestry of meaning.

Athletics (DC 10): As you climb the stairwell to the balcony, you notice a few steps creaking and a couple feeling particularly unstable. You deftly navigate them, avoiding any potential mishap. (If player fails the roll, they will break the steps but still make it up the stairwell.)

Investigation (DC 5): While exploring, you come across a vandalized pew that has been turned askew. With some effort, you manage to carefully return it to its upright position.

Investigation (DC 13): With a successful roll, players find a folded note tucked beneath one of the pews. It appears to be written by a preacher's kid who spent their childhood playing in the Church and there's a drawing on the back of an ocean scene with pirates. The note shares a cryptic clue about a hidden compartment in the Sanctuary ("Far right pew, 3rd from the back, you'll find my treasure in a small crack.")

 If the players look for the treasure from the preacher's kids, they will need to an Investigation (DC 5): You find a loose floorboard and open it to discover an offering envelope with two quarters in it. The note reads, "You've found my treasure, oh so fine, / Now go grab a pop, it's soda time! (There's a map drawn with pencil to the pop machine downstairs.)"

Perception (DC 10): On a successful roll, players notice a small inscription on one of the Church's walls, "Truly I tell you, unless you change and become like little children, you will never enter the kingdom of heaven. - Mathew 18:3"

Perception (DC 5): Amidst the silence, you distinctly hear the soft creaking and groaning of the aged wooden structure, evoking a sense of nostalgia and a subtle reminder of the church's storied past.

Religion (DC 12): Upon a successful Religion check, players discern that this room experienced frequent use during the late 1970s, evident from the remnants of teal shaded carpeting and the faded cushions on the pews. It was super trendy in its prime.

F3 Choir Loft

Performance (DC 10): Players can practice singing a hymn or a song of their choice. Success boosts their confidence and familiarity with the choir loft.

Performance (DC 15): Players attempt a challenging song. Success impresses any observers and helps them feel more comfortable performing.

Performance (DC 20): Players try to harmonize with another character. Success showcases their musical talent and may lead to a beautiful duet.

F4 Pulpit

Persuasion (DC 10): Players practice delivering a short message or sermon. Success helps them gain confidence in their oratory skills.

Persuasion (DC 15): Players try to deliver an inspiring message. Success may move any listeners and leave a lasting impression.

Persuasion (DC 20): Players attempt to captivate the audience with a powerful and compelling message. Success can lead to a memorable moment of inspiration.

F5 Choir Room

The choir room exudes a warm, nostalgic charm. The orange marbled shag carpet, though worn in places, still feels inviting underfoot. A scattering of old chairs surround a sturdy director's stand, bearing the weight of countless morning practices before church. Above a row of file cabinets, instruments hang like echoes of melodies past—a violin, guitar, harp, and a particularly unique tambourine. On the opposite wall, the choir robes hang, each garment telling its own story of wear, tear, and size. Close to the door, you'll find a collection of photographs capturing the rich history of the choir over the decades. The groups varied in size, boasting a robust 40 members at their peak, and the final dedicated five members during the later years of the church's flourishing era. There is an office door that appears to be locked.

Investigation (DC 10): Players examine the file cabinets, finding a wealth of old sheet music. Success grants them insight into the musical history of the church.

Divine Lore (DC 15): Players inspect the unique tambourine, sensing a faint aura of divine significance. Success reveals that it seems like a priceless heirloom (this belongs to Melody outside)

Performance (DC 12): Players try their hand at playing one of the instruments (violin, guitar, or harp). Success indicates a basic proficiency, and a pleasant melody fills the room.

Perception (DC 15): Players notice a hidden compartment within the director's stand. Success reveals a small, tattered journal, filled with heartfelt notes and reflections from past choir members.

History (DC 12): Players delve into the choir robes, finding tags with names of long-forgotten members. Success provides a glimpse into the vibrant community that once filled this room.

Office Door / Sleight of Hand (DC 15): A successful roll will open the door.

On the desk, you find a collection of cassette tapes and recorders, evidently used for recording performances. The tapes are meticulously organized and labeled, each one corresponding to a significant solo or performance.

F6 The Office

The main office is a room filled with the echoes of days gone by. The pastor's office stands as a testament to years of service, with shelves lined with books and mementos of faith. Behind it, a small study exudes an air of contemplation, its walls adorned with faded scriptures. The adjacent food pantry, once a source of aid for the homeless in the community, now bears the marks of time and tiny intruders. There are few mice that run and hide when you enter the room. A few unopened cans sit forlornly on the shelves. In the center of it all, the secretary's office welcomes visitors, a hub that once connected the various functions of this active space.

Investigation (DC 12): Players sift through the pastor's office and find several sermon's that were handwritten and old computer parts like the infamous Apple IIGS, dot matrix printer that could do color printing, and several storage boxes of floppy disks.

Perception (DC 15): On the secretary's desk, there are several letters marked, "Past due" and notices from the city government concerning the church's fire code violations.

Nature (DC 10): Players examine the contents of the food pantry, identifying any non-perishable items that might still be salvageable and potentially finding a hidden cache of preserved treats.

Animal Handling (DC 19): If a player is successful, they can coerce a mouse to become their pet, and it will crawl into their pocket.

Sleight of Hand (DC 15): With nimble fingers, players attempt to finesse a stuck drawer in the study. If successful, they find some pocket change (about fifty cents) and some peppermint candy.

Religion (DC 15): Players carefully examine the pastor's stoles, recognizing not only their significance in the church services.

texts and historical accounts of the church's founding, offering insight into the community's past.

Perception (DC 14): Sharp-eyed adventurers might notice a loose brick and a compartment that has remained undisturbed for centuries. (Add a box with civil war photos from the first pastor's past. These photos are a rare-find including never before seen photos).

F7 Nursery

The nursery exudes a sense of quiet nostalgia, frozen in time. Toys are meticulously arranged, invoking memories of laughter and play. Rocking chairs offer a glimpse into the comforting moments spent with little ones. Cabinets hold remnants of days gone by—diapers, wipes, and baby food jars, neatly organized. At the back lies a smaller room, once the realm of slumbering infants in their cribs. Sunlight streams through the windows, casting a warm glow that harkens back to the days when this room was alive with the exuberance of youth.

F8 - The First Office

As you step through the creaking doorway, time folds upon itself, and you find yourselves standing in the pastor's office of 1895, untouched by the years. The walls are adorned with solid wood panels and the air is thick with the musk of aged paper and lingering incense. The office, now a makeshift museum, holds a myriad of artifacts, each telling a story of faith and toil.

Investigation (DC 13): Scouring through the desk, players can uncover handwritten sermons, their edges brittle with age, and an assortment of fountain pens, their nibs clogged with ink long since dried.

History (DC 12): A detailed examination of the bookshelves may reveal first editions of religious

B1

The basement floor of the church held a trove of hidden spaces. Among them were the scout room, where memories of youthful adventures lingered, the boiler room, once humming with the pulse of the building, and the fellowship hall, where echoes of past gatherings still resonated. In the distant corner, a lone pop machine stood as a relic of times gone by. Adjacent to the hall, the kitchen bore signs of countless shared meals and gatherings. A quiet library beckoned with shelves laden with knowledge, while a Sunday School room exuded the charm of days filled with youthful laughter and learning. With limited windows, the basement exuded an air of secrecy, as if it guarded the church's cherished memories.

B1 Scout Room

The scout room was a vault of cherished memories, a testament to days gone by. Baker tents, their wooden poles neatly stacked, stood like time-worn sentinels, still whispering tales of past campouts. Cast iron Dutch ovens, pots, and pans adorned the shelves, bearing the seasoned marks of countless meals cooked over open flames. The chuck boxes, once bustling kitchens for hungry scouts, now stood in quiet readiness. Uniforms, hand-me-downs for eager newcomers, hung in silent anticipation. Amongst this nostalgic display, a lone sock lingered, a relic of bygone days where no scout would claim it. Yet, the true gem was an ancient compass, its significance surpassing even the annals of scouting history.

Damian's compass is in here.

B2 The Library

The library exuded an air of refined elegance, standing out as the most well-appointed room in the entire church. Lined with a rich collection of books encompassing Christian theology and children's literature, it offered a haven for intellectual pursuits.

The Executive-style furniture added a touch of timeless class, complemented by the soft, modern Berber carpet in a serene shade of light blue. This room also served as a cherished venue for events like bridal showers and engaging discussions on various literary works among the church members. Restrooms are both ends of the library and a once vibrant young adult Sunday School Room is adjacent to the ladies restroom. Santiago's book can be found here with an investigation roll. DC8 or make it more challenging.

B3 The Boiler Room

The Boiler Room, a cramped and slightly disorienting space, houses an assortment of essential machinery. Large units for heating and air conditioning, the water heater for the baptistry, and numerous important gas lines all converge here. To the side, a workshop remains untouched for decades. In this dimly lit, metallic chamber, an unexpected adversary awaits. A rather bold rat "Boiler Room Rat" on p. 203, undoubtedly accustomed to this domain, seems ready to engage the players.

In this impromptu encounter, the players will have to think on their feet and utilize the tools available to them in the workshop. Each player will have access to a tool hanging on the wall, providing them with an impromptu weapon. Generate a rat per player... or... just have one rat and let the group watch one player do combat as a tutorial.

Combat Rules: When engaged in combat, players and enemies take turns making attacks, with each turn representing about six seconds of real-time action.

Dice Rolls: Players will roll a 20-sided die (a d20) to determine the outcome of their attacks. They will add their relevant modifiers to the roll to increase their chances of hitting the target.

Attack Roll: To attack the rat, a player rolls a d20 and adds their attack modifier. If the result is equal to or higher than the rat's Armor Class (AC), the attack hits.

Damage Roll: Once a hit is confirmed, the player rolls the damage dice specified for the weapon/tool they are using. They then add their damage modifier.

Example Combat Sequence Table:
Rat's Stats (p. 203):	Player's Class:
HP (Hit Points): 5	HP (Hit Points): 12
AC (Armor Class): 12	AC (Armor Class): 14
Rat's Attack:	Random Hammer Attack: 1d8 bludgeoning damage
Bite: +2 to hit, 1d4 piercing damage
Roll D20 for Initiative:	- Player rolls an 11 - Rat rolls an 8 Player goes first.
Player's Turn:	- Player decides to attack the rat with the hammer. - He rolls a 15 to hit - He beat the Rat's AC = 12 - He rolls a d8 dice and deals: 4 bludgeoning damage to the rat.
Rat's Turn:	- The rat tries to bite Garret. - The rat rolls a 9 to hit, but misses. - If he rolled a 14 or higher would have hit player.
Player's Turn:	- Player attacks again with his hammer. - He rolls a 12 to hit. - Damage Roll: 3 bludgeoning damage.
End of Battle:	- Player's HP: 12 - Rat's HP: 0

B4 The Kitchen

The kitchen exudes a faint aroma of endless coffee pots, as if the echoes of past brews still linger in the air. Multiple refrigerators stand tall and dusty, their doors slightly ajar, hinting at empty interiors once bustling with food. Four distinct ovens line one wall, their dormant chambers now silent witnesses to countless meals prepared with care. In the center of it all, a long island counter bears the scars of countless gatherings and shared meals.

Alongside the windows, a counter awaits, once the stage for hearty servings and shared conversations. Though now void of its former vitality, it still harbors memories of lively conversations and the laughter of fellowship.

Yet, amidst the faded remnants of culinary history, a jar of long-forgotten grape juice sits, its contents having succumbed to the inexorable march of time. The musty odor emanating from it leaves no doubt—it's far from the robust wine it may have aspired to be.

Constitution Check (DC 15): For the daring or the curious, a player may choose to test their mettle against the aged grape juice. A successful roll allows them to take a tentative sip, experiencing an odd blend of mustiness and faint sweetness. Fortunately, no adverse effects follow.

Investigation Check (DC 12): Players scour the kitchen, seeking any overlooked details or potential treasures that may have been missed. With a successful roll, they find a stack of well-preserved recipe cards, offering a glimpse into the culinary traditions of days gone by.

Perception Check (DC 10): Keen eyes scan the surroundings, noting any unusual or out-of-place details that might hold significance. Though the kitchen bears the signs of neglect, players discern a faded mural of Jesus with fish feeding thousands on one wall—a testament to the artistry that once graced this space.

Overall, the kitchen stands as a testament to the vibrant history of shared meals and fellowship, its fading echoes still reverberating within its walls.

B5 Fellowship Hall

In its prime, the fellowship hall was a bustling hub of activity, hosting up to 500 men during Holy Week's "Men's Breakfast," where individuals from various churches, regardless of their denominations, would gather. Folded tables, neatly stored in a closet, awaited their next use. A small stage, an extension of the hall, saw Children's Church services and musical events with guest performers. Serving windows connected the hall to the kitchen, and the pop machine stood stocked with refreshments. On the stage, three flags—the Christian flag, the Scout Troop Flag, and the United States flag—waved proudly. It's a snapshot of days long past, waiting to be discovered once more. Jason's flag to retrieve is the Christian flag on the stage. Perhaps if a player puts the two quarter's in the pop machine, he/she will pick a new quest from the preacher's kid. (This is just an idea... edit it out if need to stay on task)

Second Floor + Balcony

The Storyteller has the flexibility to decide the results of dice rolls in these rooms. Being adept at improvisation and thinking on the fly is valuable for a smooth and engaging storytelling experience. Remember, the “Daughters of Valor” room has Delphine’s Shield. If a player needs to retrieve that item, now is the time.

S1 Old Sunday School

As the door creaks open, you are greeted by the solemn stillness of an abandoned Sunday school room, suspended in time since the 1920s. The air is thick with the scent of old wood and paper, the light filtering through the grimy windows casting long shadows across the forlorn furniture. Rows of antiquated, wooden chairs face a chalkboard, its surface ghosted with the faintest hints of lessons long past. The walls are adorned with frayed and faded biblical prints, and time-worn books are scattered across a teacher’s desk, their leather spines cracked and pages curled.

Investigation (DC 18): A thorough search may uncover a forgotten journal tucked in a desk drawer, its entries providing a glimpse into the daily life of a Sunday school teacher from a bygone era. Most attendance logs and a record of events to be communicated during class.

History (DC 20): A detailed examination of the artifacts and décor might reveal insights into the religious education practices of the 1920s, offering a unique perspective on the cultural values of the time.

Perception (DC 17): Keen observers could notice the remnants of a message on the chalkboard written in Hebrew, it was once common in religious teachings but now nearly lost to history.

Survival (DC 15): An examination of the area may reveal signs of small animals or birds that have taken refuge in the room, finding shelter amidst the sacred silence.

S2 Chi-Rho Room

You gingerly push open the door to the Sunday school room, a quiet, forgotten chamber where dust motes dance in the shafts of light from stained-glass windows. The chairs, small and immobile, form an arrangement facing a lonely teacher's desk. A piano sits in the back for when the teacher would sing with the kids as part of the class. A closed Bible, its cover faded, rests beside yellowed storybooks that haven't felt the eager flip of pages in many years. The walls, though clean, are a faded mosaic of biblical scenes and crayon drawings, their colors dimmed by the passage of time. A solitary bookshelf in the corner stands as a silent guardian to puzzles and games, their pieces intact yet untouched.

Investigation (DC 9): Delving into the desk might reveal preserved letters from former students, a teacher's notes that speak of a different era, and perhaps an antique, handcrafted bookmark tucked within the Bible.

History (DC 5): Studying the drawings on the walls could provide glimpses into past celebrations and teachings, allowing players to piece together stories of the community that once thrived here.

Performance (DC 15): An attempt to coax a melody from the old piano might stir more than just silence, perhaps a glow from the faded words on the torah in the common room may occur. (That's all that happens for now, player's can't activate anything beyond a few glowing words that through a History (DC 10) roll you can see it's Exodus 15:2.

S3 Green Room Scholars

Stepping into the Sunday school classroom called, "The Green Room Scholars." Although "green room" is a theatre term, these kids never made it to a "stage." Fluorescent lights onced hummed overhead, casting a harsh glow over everything. Against one wall sits a metal bookshelf, its shelves bending slightly under the weight of well-thumbed workbooks from a bible curriculum that seems to scream "function over fun."

The workbooks are dotted with doodles in the margins—evidence of daydreams and silent rebellion against the monotony of rote learning. Scattered around the room are small, rigid chairs, the kind that might have been called practical by the budget committee but uncomfortable by anyone who has to sit in them for more than five minutes. The chairs are arrayed in rigid rows, all facing forward, as if in anticipation of a lecture that would require several moments of telling the kids to sit still be silent while the adult went on... and on...

In one corner, a corkboard hangs, bristling with drawings from the kids. They show a different vision for the room: vibrant colors, streamers, and a space that invites laughter and discussion rather than the strict order that sent them away. These sketches stand in stark contrast to the drab reality, it wa the last hope and imagination in a space that desperately needed it.

Investigation (DC 13): Players who search through the workbooks might find hidden notes or doodles that reveal insights into the children's thoughts or secrets they shared among themselves while bored with the leadership.

Perception (DC 15): A careful look around the room could reveal subtle signs of wear and tear that tell a story of the room's long history. Old attendance charts show diminishing numbers over one year, the final peak of attendance was the Christmas service.

Insight (DC 14): By examining the children's drawings on the corkboard, players can gauge the kids' dissatisfaction with the current state of the room and their yearning for a more vibrant and engaging environment.

History (DC 12): Identifying the specific era of the curriculum and furniture can provide context about the educational and cultural mindset of the 1980s, especially in a religious setting. The questions were simple activities like cross-word puzzles.

Divine Lore (DC 18): If a player wishes to sense any lingering past events or emotional moments in the room, a high DC reflects the difficulty due to the mundane nature of the space.

S4 Common Area

The common room on the top floor is a spacious area that connects various Sunday school rooms. In the middle, a stage stands with an array of costumes from diverse biblical settings, each garment telling its own story. However, there's something peculiar about the stage – it lacks an audience area, instead a towering wall bearing a weathered scroll, its age evident in its faded parchment. The words that once graced it have vanished, leaving behind an air of mystery. At the base of the scroll rests a small ceramic lamp, its wick extinguished, but the oil seems fresh.

Investigation (DC 5): Players see costumes and a sword as Garret described outside.

Investigation (DC 15): Players thoroughly examine the large scroll, hoping to find any hidden clues or mechanisms that might restore the vanished text. Success reveals faint traces of ancient ink, suggesting that the scroll may have contained valuable knowledge.

Perception (DC 14): Keen eyes scan the stage area for any signs of hidden compartments or concealed mechanisms that might be related to the unusual setup. Success uncovers a small panel on the stage floor, which appears to be a concealed storage compartment. An Investigation of (DC15) reveals there are empty vials inside this compartment that contained olive oil in them.

History (DC 10): Players draw on their knowledge of ancient texts and scripts to see if they can identify any remnants of the vanished words on the scroll. Success allows them to make out a few faded phrases, hinting at the words from the Torah.

Religion (DC 12): With a focus on matters of faith and spirituality, players investigate the stage area to see if there are any religious symbols or motifs that might shed light on the situation. Success reveals intricate carvings along the stage's edge, depicting scenes from biblical stories.

Divine Lore (DC 12): Players use their knowledge of religious and divine matters to inspect the ceramic lamp, attempting to discern if it holds any spiritual significance or powers. Success reveals that the lamp once emitted a soft, calming light, but it has long since faded. This lamp is referenced many times in the Bible and still has some residual olive oil in it.

S5 The Hangout

Welcome to "The Hangout" Sunday school room, transformed into a teenager's dream lounge rather than a traditional learning space. The walls are a vibrant patchwork of graffiti art, painted by the kids, showcasing music, sports, and cartoons, but noticeably devoid of religious imagery.

In one corner, a well-used pool table sits next to a foosball table, symbols of playful competition and laughter. Scattered around are mismatched couches and bean bags, creating cozy nooks for informal gatherings and discussions.

This room, once a haven for religious education, has shifted to prioritize social interaction over structured lessons. It was a lively, fun space, but its transformation was a clear shift away from traditional Sunday school teachings, reflecting the '90s emphasis on creating a space where kids felt at home.

Investigation (DC 14): Players searching the room can discover hidden notes or keepsakes tucked away in the couch cushions or underneath the pool table, revealing stories but mostly love notes (many boxes were checked yes...) and teenage gossip.

Perception (DC 15): Observant players might notice subtle details in the graffiti art that hint at the room's previous life as a more traditional Sunday school space, like faint outlines of religious symbols painted over.

Divine Lore (DC 13): Players skilled in Divine Lore could sense residual spiritual energies, perhaps from earnest discussions or personal revelations that once occurred here, despite the room's current secular appearance.

History (DC 13): By examining the room's decor and setup, players can piece together how youth culture and attitudes towards religious education have evolved over the decades. Attendance charts showed a consistent 5-10 kids on average, some of the church's lowest numbers ever.

Dexterity (Sleight of Hand) (DC 15): Successfully maneuvering a tricky shot on the pool table or executing a winning move in foosball might.

S6 Daughters of Valor

You enter a room proudly titled "Daughters of Valor," its door swinging open to reveal a freshly modernized classroom that contrasts sharply with the antiquated halls outside. The walls are a crisp, clean white, and vibrant LED lights cast a bright, even glow over the space. The centerpiece of the room is a collection of gorgeous shields, each emblazoned with symbols of strength and courage, hanging with intention on the main wall. They gleam under the lights, their polished surfaces reflecting the ethos of empowerment that this room embodies.

Investigation (DC 14): A close inspection of the shields may reveal the names of notable women from the Bible, their deeds inscribed along the edges, encouraging students to delve deeper into their stories.

Perception (DC 16): A discerning eye might catch the subtle integration of inspirational quotes etched around the room's borders, meant to motivate and uplift.

History (DC 5-20): Use the dice result and explain each shield for every five points rolled. By studying the detailed imagery on each shield, players can uncover the stories of four remarkable women from the Bible, each from a different era. The Shield of Deborah, adorned with a palm tree and battle imagery, speaks of her leadership in ancient Israel. The Shield of Esther, with its royal symbols, tells the tale of her bravery in the Persian court. The Shield of Ruth, decorated with barley sheaves and a path, represents her journey and devotion during the period of the Judges. Lastly, the Shield of Mary, featuring a white lily and the Star of Bethlehem, reflects her purity and maternal role in the New Testament. Piecing together these visuals, players gain a deeper understanding of the timeline and significance of female valor throughout biblical history.

Religion (DC 17): Exploring the texts and materials provided in the room could lead to a discovery of the religious origins of the term "Daughters of Valor."

Art (DC 13): An appraisal of the craftsmanship of the shields could reveal the hand of a master artisan, each shield a contemporary creation designed to inspire as much as to pay homage to the virtues of bravery and resilience.

S7 The Empty Room

You enter a room that exudes an aura of quiet neglect, its purpose never truly realized since the church's inception. The space is starkly empty, its bare walls and unadorned floor echoing with the faint memories of what could have been for a generation of kids that never came. There are no traces of furniture or decoration, just the unblemished surfaces speaking to its untouched nature. The natural kaleidoscope of colors comes from the stained glass window lighting the room.

S8 Balcony

The balcony offers a nostalgic view of the church's interior. Rows of weathered stadium seats line all sides, facing towards the front. At the back, an abandoned room stands empty, its secrets long since departed. The grand stained-glass windows cast a kaleidoscope of colors, infusing the space with an ethereal glow. Stairwells on each side lead back down, their timeworn wood whispering tales of years gone by. This lofty vantage point is an ideal setting for players to test their skills.

Acrobatics (DC 14): Players attempt to navigate the creaking floorboards with grace and agility. Success allows them to move fluidly, while failure may result in an unsteady step.

Athletics (DC 15): Players endeavor to shift a particularly stubborn seat, aiming to prove their might. Success leads to a satisfying move, while failure results in strained muscles.

Stealth (DC 13): Moving quietly across the balcony, players aim to remain undetected. Success allows them to maintain their silence, while failure may lead to a lot of cracking wood noises (normal and nothing dangerous).

Sleight of Hand (DC 12): Players unlock the abandoned room, looking for any hidden treasures or signs of past occupants. Success rolls reveal an old barbie doll laying on the floor, while a failed roll keeps the room locked.

Scene 3: The Call to Restore the Torah

Gabriel greets you with an encouraging smile, his eyes reflecting a mix of hope and determination. "Ah, our courageous adventurers return! Your efforts have been a beacon of light in these challenging times. You see, this yard sale isn't just a gathering; it's a crucial step towards raising the funds we need to repair our beloved church. Every item you've brought back, every story you've uncovered, it all helps to draw in more support. We're fighting to ensure that this place of worship and community isn't condemned to be just a memory. Tell me, what tales do you bring from your journey within these hallowed walls?"

Listen to the players responses and shift this next box to fit the dialogue.

As you share your adventures, Gabriel listens intently, his enthusiasm growing with each tale. "Incredible! Each relic you've returned, each piece of our history you've helped to preserve, it's all vital in keeping the spirit of this church alive. Your efforts are not just about the past; they're about securing our future."

After a moment of reflection, his gaze shifts towards the church. "Speaking of our rich history, there's something else that weighs heavily on my heart. We have an ancient Torah scroll up there, a priceless piece of our heritage. In your explorations, did you chance upon it? I'm particularly concerned about its well-being, especially now, as we strive to save our church from being lost. Any information you have about the scroll could be invaluable in our mission to restore and rejuvenate this sacred place.

Listen to the players responses and shift this next box to fit the dialogue.

Gabriel's voice carries a weight of both concern and hope as he addresses the players. "You see, dear ones, the fading of this sacred scroll signifies a passing of time, a lapse in the continuity of our spiritual heritage. The essence of these teachings has waned, for they have not graced the ears of our youth in many a year. The words will continue to vanish unless we act now. It is now upon your capable shoulders to breathe life into these ancient words, to rekindle the luminous fire that once burned brightly within them. As generations before you did, so too must you take up this noble task. By doing so, you shall not only honor our past, but also pave the way for a future where the light of our faith continues to guide those who seek its solace.

In this pivotal moment, the elderly church members rise up with a renewed vitality, exuding an aura of ancient wisdom and purpose. Before the players, they stand, their spirits echoing the vigor of their younger selves that once filled these hallowed grounds. It's evident that these mortal souls are keen for the players to step into the roles they once embraced in their own youthful days, granting them a sense of empowerment and understanding of the task that needs to be accomplished. Each player is offered a bag brimming with supplies tailor-made for their chosen class. Along with these provisions, they place into the hands of the players a weapon befitting their class, ensuring that they are well-prepared for the tasks that lie ahead.

Character Sheets

At this point, hand each player their character sheet. Starting on p. 177, each class features a detailed set of information that players need to complete. Due to the ever-changing evolution of the players' characters, it's important that they complete these character sheets with a pencil. Once players fill in the sheets, they should place these in a sheet protector plastic sleeve, and then they can use a wet-erase marker to write on the sheet protector. The players will use the marker for things like combat notes and other encounters that will be erased after the session. Frequent use of pencils may lead to wear and tear of the paper over time. There are countless other ways to do this; however, it's essential to remember that this game is designed to be playable without reliance on technology. This ensures that players can enjoy the game in any situation, whether it's outside of church, e.g., camping, traveling, or during power outages.

Joy Killer Warning

Avoid delving into the myriad options for Neweyes character development. The average player will likely experience Tabletop Role-Playing Games (TTRPGs) for the first time in this setting. If a player is interested in further exploration, they are encouraged to visit a local comic book store or gaming lounge. Neweyes primarily focuses on Bible discovery rather than character development.

Also, if you have experienced TTRPG players in your group, ensure they do not dominate or confuse the new players. Discuss game dynamics and expectations with experienced players before the session begins. This "Zero Mission" will cover all aspects of character creation.

Gabriel's countenance grows more earnest as he imparts a profound revelation. "Know this, brave souls," he intones, "the ancient lamp, a beacon of light from a time predating even Moses, must be rekindled. Its flame, fueled by rare olive oil, holds the key to unlocking the church's dormant powers and guiding you on your extraordinary journey. When you ascend to the top floor, find the lamp and ignite it, a wondrous phenomenon shall unfold before your very eyes. You shall find yourselves transported into the sacred tales of the Torah, witnessing its stories come to life in vivid reality. And in so doing, the faded words of our sacred scrolls will be restored, seen anew through the pure gaze of new eyes."

Remaining Character Creation Tasks:

- Character Name - Adam will name them in episode 2.
- Weapons Enhancements - Nephilum people will assist with this in episode 4.
- Character Leveling - Review Faith Points to the players and show how 52 points are earned throughout the sessions, and the other 48 are real
